11:30-13:00 Plenary (i): Action Imperatives and Realities of Finance and Debt

Africa's most urgent priorities, including financial sustainability, debt action, and climate finance, are the focus of this first plenary, which highlights interfaith recommendations on the G20's responsibilities for the global financial architecture. Priorities for food security, migration and refugees, disaster preparedness, and education and health are intricately linked to this framework, including action by multilateral banks and private actors. The G20 Interfaith Forum's primary goal and priority is action to support the world's most vulnerable communities, an imperative shared by diverse religious communities around the world in their teachings and practice. South Africa's G20 agenda, the global agendas for the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), and Africa 2063 (African Union) echo this critical attention to action to address issues of poverty and hunger, inequalities that hinder the flourishing of women and families, and national development strategies.

14:10-15:15 Plenary (ii). Action on Hunger and Poverty

Concrete actions to address poverty and hunger are priorities for the G20, building on the launch of the Global Alliance against Hunger in November 2024. This session will outline the shared and distinctive teachings of different religious traditions on hunger and its links to poverty, and the widely diverse programs that serve those in need. It will highlight the vital roles of religious leaders, communities, and actors within the Global Alliance as well as links among poverty, health, and agriculture. South Africa's engagement of religious communities illuminates the links between teachings, ethical commitment, and practical action on the ground.

15:45-17:00 Concurrent Sessions A

A1 Fighting Hunger as a Critical Element in Addressing Poverty
Breakout Room 1 – Plenary 1

Global commitments to revitalize action to end hunger, both where famine looms and for broader threats to vulnerable communities (children especially), must include religious actors as integral, essential partners. This session will highlight national and faith commitments under the Global Alliance against Hunger, assessing the state of knowledge on how best to end hunger and link it to broader development and humanitarian strategies, with examples of best practice at national and community levels.

Moderator(s)

Dr. Renier Koegelenberg, Director, CDDC Trust/EFSA Institute, South Africa
Dr. Sylvia Pheto, Commissioner, IF20 LOC, South Africa

Elder Denelson Silva, General Authority, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Brazil

A2 2025 as a Jubilee Year: Principles of Equity in the Architecture of Finance
Breakout Room 2 – Plenary 2

Action to address solidarity, equality, and sustainability (South Africa's G20 themes) demand political will, resources, and creative partnerships. The Catholic Church's urgent call to unity and action during the Jubilee year 2025 highlights the links among the three imperatives. The session will focus on alliances and action that the call has engaged, with a focus on how calls for resources relate to priorities for the G20 Summit and community. The discussion will draw on examples linked to disaster preparedness, action on just energy transitions, and humanitarian response.

Moderator(s)

A3 Interreligious action in Africa: South Africa and AU Priorities
Breakout Room 3 – Bartholomew Diaz Room

Africa and South Africa offer extraordinary experience with interfaith cooperation in many fields, including working for peace, responding to health crises (HIV/AIDS, Ebola, COVID-19), and leading on empowerment of women. The African Union (AU), now a G20 member, aims to highlight the roles of religious communities in continental strategies. This session will highlight pertinent experience of religious and multireligious organizations as well as the challenges they confront.

9:45-11:30 Plenary (iii) Education: Leading Human Development Imperatives

This plenary session will focus on education and, more broadly, translating the oft-stated priority of “youth” into effective action. What role does education play with regard to values and social cohesion? How can religion respond to global education challenges, including access, quality, and links to life skills? The discussion aims to link the goals of quality education for all to the challenges of social cohesion and assuring diversity and equality among different communities. What are the roles of religious communities within education programs? The session will highlight examples of programs tailored to these objectives, such as Indonesia’s Cross Cultural Religious Literacy (CCRL) program, Ethics Education, as pioneered by Arigatou International, and South African examples. The challenges of intergroup tensions and efforts to address them, including youth perspectives, will be highlighted.

9:00-9:15 Summary of Previous Day. Katherine Marshall

9:15-10:45 Plenary (iv) Sustainability: Religious responsibilities and Action

Climate change is a leading issue for the G20, with sustainability a central priority for South Africa's G20 agenda. The priority issues of financing action to mitigate and alleviate climate change are a continuing G20 focus. Of immediate and priority importance for Africa are effective responses to natural disasters, notably those linked to climate change, and thus disaster prevention, response, and recovery. This plenary will focus on climate imperatives, with a focus on actual and potential roles of religious actors. The wisdom and issues facing traditional communities will be one focus. The challenges of sustainability also involve conflicts and population movements, thus refugees and migration (and associated social tensions) and the growing links of these developments to climate change. The session will link issues of disruption of societies to challenges for religious freedom.

D4. Distinctive Wisdom, Special Challenges facing Traditional Communities

Breakout Room 4 – Vasco Da Gama Room

Traditional communities pride themselves on their insight into the tight bonds between human life and the natural environment. Yet forces that accelerate deforestation, lands degradation, and displacement, and pressures for mining, especially of critical minerals, threaten both the environment and traditional ways of life. This session looks to challenges, wisdom, and solidarity in the quest for solutions.

D5. The Impact of Theology and Advocacy in Action: The Examples of Laudato Si', Al Mizan

Breakout Room 5 – Prince Edward Island and Schappen Island Room

This session will begin with the theological underpinning for taking action to promote climate progress by faith communities with a particular focus on the Laudato Si movement, the Al Mizan, and the actions taken by religious leaders and actors to address climate change through UN COP meetings and innumerable other contexts. The session will focus on how faith actors and faith leaders can work to ensure no one is left behind through their advocacy work on tackling the triple planetary crisis—climate change, biodiversity loss, and pollution. The session will address the relationship between climate change and conflict by amplifying the voices of African communities currently embroiled in climate-connected conflict. The session will place a particular emphasis on how women and youth faith actors can impact the intricate balance of climate and politics to build peace. The session will also consider the role and responsibility of religious communities to help youth to be stronger and more resilient in the face of climate change, natural disasters, and accompanying conflicts.

D6 Women's Roles in Building Peace and Sustainable Communities: Religious Dimensions

Breakout Room 6 – Seal Island and Robben Island Room

Women's absence from formal peace processes across the world is notorious and widely bemoaned; it accentuates a pattern that renders the creative and important work of women working from and within religious communities especially invisible. This session will explore the nature of the challenge and highlight exemplary peacebuilding work at community and global levels that involve women's distinctive peacebuilding approaches.

13:55-15:15 Plenary (v) Leave No One Behind: Vulnerable Communities at the Center

This plenary draws together recommended IF20 strategies that at their heart center on equity, humanity, and interreligious solidarity. Its focus is on action proposals addressed both to the G20 and to religious and interreligious communities. The plight of refugees and especially vulnerable children and women are a focus, as are security and violence, within the home and community and beyond. How should concerns about the vulnerable be addressed in the context of human trafficking and modern slavery?

E1 Focus on Refugees, Migrants, and Internally Displaced People: Faith, Rights, and Protection

Breakout Room 1 – Ballroom

Critical challenges of human displacement, especially linked to conflicts but increasingly to the effects of changing climate conditions, present policy and humanitarian demands that from many perspectives require new global, national, and local responses. Generosity in welcoming refugees, displaced people, and voluntary migrants can sadly give way to xenophobia and social tensions. The rich religious traditions of welcoming the stranger support both urgent responses and mechanisms to build on narratives and policies that are responsive to contemporary challenges but also prepare the way for what are widely understood as rising future levels of human movement and intersocietal engagement. Plural societies are an inevitability, and religious communities need to lead in the underlying societal understanding and response to current and future needs.

E5 Child Rights and Dignity: A Religious Imperative

Breakout Room 5 – Prince Edward Island and Schappen Island Room

Focusing on children, including their situation within families and communities, is a leading priority of religious communities. Children's rights are also a central priority for the United Nations. Looking to action to assure the welfare of children highlights the importance of child protection. Internet and social media present both new opportunities and new perils for children. This session will explore innovative religiously-inspired responses to the linked challenges of child protection and promotion of thriving in families and communities.

E6 Ubuntu Meets Talanoa: A Conversation about the Most Vulnerable Populations Affected by Climate Change and Learning from Different Examples of Traditional, Cultural, and Indigenous Practice

Breakout Room 6 – Seal Island and Robben Island Room

Ubuntu and Talanoa originate from different geographical and cultural contexts, but they share some key principles that can be seen as converging or meeting in spirit: Interconnectedness and shared humanity; a focus on community and collective understanding; and a respect for Indigenous knowledge and worldviews. This conversation about the most vulnerable populations affected by climate change recognizes that individuals are part of the whole and reflects upon how the values from our faith traditions can inform policy and action on climate change. This session will include ideas and examples of leadership from traditional and indigenous communities and will include a particular focus on the Southern African experience.
